Crockett teaches traditional Welsh recipes

Chef John Crockett from Cardiff and Vale College, Wales, poses with students of ILM when he was visiting the institute to conduct master classes on traditional Welsh delicacies.

From 16th to 26th April, IIHM students experienced the best of Welsh cuisine at their campuses. Chef John Crockett from Cardiff and Vale College, Wales was in India, conducting masterclasses at IIHM campuses in Pune, Jaipur and Delhi. He received a traditional welcome to each of the campuses where he spoke to students about Welsh cuisine, the traditions associated with the cuisine and, of course, the method of preparation. He demonstrated how to make traditional Welsh tea cakes or bara brith with flour, raisins and brown sugar. “These are traditional cakes that Welsh people enjoy with their tea,” said Crockett. He also demonstrated how to make Cawl, a popular broth in Wales that is made with lamb and lots of veggies. This delicious mix of meat and vegetables is a meal in itself. Further, students also learnt to make the popular Fish and chips with a lip-smacking tartare dip. “The entire experience was wonderful. It was a great learning experience for us to learn traditional recipes from Chef Crockett,” said a student of IIHM from Jaipur.

Chef John Crockett received by Prof Debasish Ghosh, Director, IIHM Pune. A traditional welcome with garland, flowers and a Rajasthani turban awaited Crockett who was visiting IIHM campuses at Pune, Jaipur and Delhi.
